

AIM Looking For A Job CV and LinkedIn

Pierpaolo Necchi
pierpaolo.necchi@gmail.com

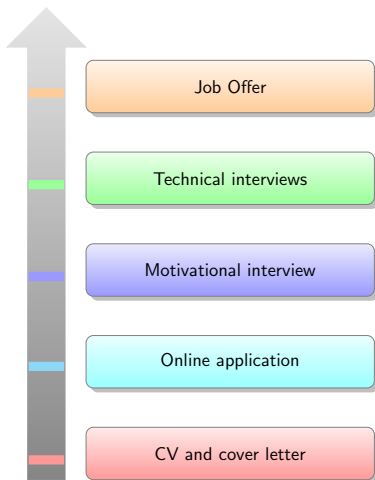

Politecnico di Milano

May 19, 2016

Plan

- 1 Introduction
- 2 CV
- 3 LinkedIn
- 4 Conclusions

Recruitment Process Timeline

I Want To Be An Investment Banker!

Some Personal Considerations

Be Ambitious

- Last week I might have scared you or discouraged you...
- These talks are calibrated on the recruitment processes of top international companies
- It may seem too hard, but...
- Academically, mathematical engineers are very well prepared compared to the rest of European students
- But often they are not able to “sell themselves”
- To land your dream internship, you need to know the process and to prepare
- Be ambitious: you have what it takes!

First Considerations

Why should you make an effort on your CV?

- Your CV is the golden ticket for an interview
- It must be perfect in every detail

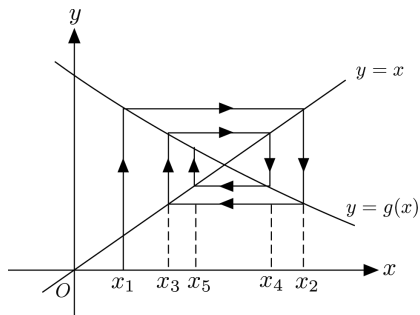

How much time an HR spends on your CV?

10 seconds

Immediate consequences

- Your CV needs to be well structured
- No stupid mistakes
- Contain the relevant information

Writing a CV

- Writing a CV is an iterative process
- You won't get it right straight away
- Ask for feedback and improve it

Some Examples

There is no unique solution

- Pierpaolo Necchi
- Enrico Bertino
- Vittorio Nicoletta

Some important points

- Use bullet points and clean formatting
- Tailor the CV to the role you are applying for
- If you don't have any work experience, use academic projects
- Focus on concrete achievements and detail what you did
- Extracurricular activities shows you are a well-rounded person
- International experience and multilingualism are big pluses

What is LinkedIn?

A powerful tool that makes it easier

- to network
- to find new job opportunities
- to get noticed by recruiters
- to present yourself in interviews

Example & References

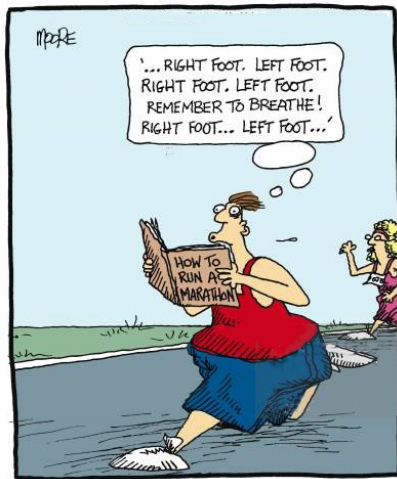

Some references

- Mergers&Inquisitions
- Forbes
- Business Insider

My profile

<https://it.linkedin.com/in/pierpaolonecchi/en>

Now It's Up to You

Great News!

Coming soon

Interviews Database

What is it?

- A community-based project for the mathematical engineers
- A short guide to the recruitment process in investment banking
- A collection of your classmates's past interviews
- A useful reference for preparing your interviews